Protesters call on advertisers to pull their ads from Fox News

Following controversial comments by TV anchors, multiple advertisers have removed or halted ads.

Advertisements featuring Fox News personalities, including Tucker Carlson, adorn the front of the News Corporation building on Wednesday in New York City. On Wednesday the network's sales executives hosted an event for advertisers to promote Fox News. Fox News personalities Tucker Carlson and Jeanine Pirro have come under criticism in recent weeks for controversial comments, and multiple advertisers have pulled away from their shows.

Calif. governor halts death penalty: 'I couldn't sleep'

2 California Gov. Gavin Newsom on Wednesday imposed a moratorium on the death penalty as the possibility of the first executions in the state in 13 years loomed. Statistics suggesting that at least one of the 737 inmates on the state's death row was innocent sealed the deal. "I couldn't sleep at night," he said at the state capitol. Newsom signed an executive order granting reprieves to death row inmates and closing the state's execution chamber. No death row inmates will be released. Newsom said he decided to make the move because elements of the death penalty, stalled in California since 2006, were suddenly moving forward on his watch. Newsom said he had anticipated that within a month he would have been asked to sign off on a new protocol for administering lethal injections to death row inmates, clearing the way for executions to begin again.

Digital sports network DAZN to start running ads

3 Digital sports network DAZN, which launched in September with the aim of disrupting traditional sports media broadcasting, will start running advertisements sometime in 2019, the company said on Wednesday. Until now, DAZN, pronounced "Da Zone," has been ad-free. This year it will introduce ads from German carmaker Volkswagen AG and brewery Krombacher, as well as a unit of Malta's Tipico Group Ltd. and GVC Holdings Plc subsidiary bwin Interactive Gaming AG, both of which are offshore sports betting operators. Headquartered in the United Kingdom, DAZN operates live and on-demand streaming content in Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Italy, Spain, Japan, Canada, the United States and plans to launch soon in Brazil. The consumer-facing content provider DAZN was part of a larger media and social gaming group called Perform Group.

3½ More years added to Manafort prison sentence

Manafort will now be imprisoned for six years and nine months.

President Donald Trump's former campaign chairman Paul Manafort was sentenced on Wednesday to about 3½ more years in prison by a judge who assailed him over his lies and criminal behavior, then was hit with a new indictment in New York on a fresh set of charges outside the reach of a potential presidential pardon.

The sentence by U.S. District Judge Amy Berman Jackson in Washington, adding to one given by a different judge in Virginia last week, means Manafort will spend six years and nine months behind bars, after being credited for nine months already served in an important chapter of Special Counsel Robert Mueller's investigation into Russia's role in the 2016 U.S. election.

Jackson sentenced Manafort, a veteran Republican political operative who earned millions of dollars working for pro-Russia politicians in Ukraine, to six years and one month for two conspiracy counts to which he pleaded guilty in September 2018 related to money laundering, unregistered lobbying and attempted witness tampering.

Jackson said 2½ years of her sentence will run at the same time as the sentence in Virginia, where he was given 47 months in prison after being convicted by a jury of tax evasion and bank fraud in another case prosecuted by Mueller.

Just minutes after Jackson read her sentence, the Manhattan district attorney unveiled a separate indictment of Manafort charging him with residential mortgage fraud and other New York state crimes. The charges are especially significant because unlike federal crimes they cannot be erased by a presidential pardon, a prospect the Republican Trump has not ruled out for Manafort.

"No one is beyond the law in New York," District Attorney Cyrus Vance, a Democrat, said in a statement.

The 16-count indictment accused Manafort and others of falsifying business records to fraudulently obtain millions of dollars in mortgages. The allegations appeared to mirror some of the fraud charges in his Virginia trial.

Unlike at his sentencing hearing last week, Manafort said he was sorry for his actions, but Jackson then told him his expression of remorse rang hollow. Jackson told Manafort that he had lied repeatedly and committed fraud repeatedly, and there was no good explanation for the leniency he sought.

"Saying 'I'm sorry I got caught' is not an inspiring plea for leniency," Jackson told Manafort, who was brought into the courtroom in a wheelchair because of a condition called gout.

Jackson could have given Manafort up to 10 years in prison in the Washington case — five for each of the two conspiracy counts.

"I am sorry for what I have done and for all the activities that have gotten us here today."

Paul Manafort

"I am sorry for what I have done and for all the activities that have gotten us here today," Manafort told Jackson.

"This case has taken everything from me already — my properties, my cash, my life insurance, trust accounts for my children and grandchildren, and even more," Manafort added.

"The defendant's insistence that none of this should be happening to him ... is just one more thing that is inconsistent with the notion of any genuine acceptance of responsibility," the judge told Manafort.

Racial hostility, political incivility roils high schools: Study

Political grudges and racial animosity have divided students at U.S. high schools and President Donald Trump has exacerbated the problem with his rhetoric, a study released on Wednesday showed.

Researchers at UCLA surveyed 505 high school principals for the study. More than 60 percent of them reported some of their students had made derogatory remarks about immigrants.

More broadly, more than 80 percent of principals said some of their students had disparaged other ethnic groups.

The UCLA study is called "School and Society in the Age of Trump," but its author said the Republican president is not solely responsible for tensions at secondary schools.

"The report is a story of this particular time, not narrowly a story of the actions of this one president, although this president's actions contribute to it," John Rogers, a professor of education at UCLA, said by phone.

A White House representative declined to comment.

The UCLA report described a charged environment at high schools, with most principals having to deal with students who make hateful or hostile remarks about other people's ethnic background or political beliefs.

Groups of white students at some schools have chanted "Build the wall!" to demean students of color, according to accounts from several principals to researchers.

Those and other instances of racial hostility at high schools bear a resemblance to Trump's rhetoric on immigration, the study said.

To bolster their contention that some hostility at schools is due to Trump's positions, the study points to a 17 percent rise in hate crimes across American society in 2017, the first year of Trump's presidency.

Some conservative students have also encountered venom from classmates.

Nearly half of principals told their students to respect students with unpopular political views, and one-third emphasized the importance of tolerating the views of conservatives.

In Wisconsin, one principal reported a small group of his students arrived at school one day wearing Trump's signature "Make America Great Again" hats, which offended some liberal teenagers and led to a fistfight.

In another episode, some students in Connecticut made demeaning comments to a white student after she showed support for Trump, a principal told researchers, and the pupil felt her teacher did not defend her right to express herself. REUTERS

The president announced the grounding of all Boeing 737 MAX 8 jets.

US grounds 737 MAX jets, Boeing shares fall again

Citing safety concerns, President Trump announced the grounding of Boeing's 737 MAX jets.

President Donald Trump on Wednesday said the United States would ground Boeing Co.'s 737 MAX jets, following Europe and other nations that have already stopped the planes flying due to safety concerns after an Ethiopian Airlines crash on Sunday, the second such disaster in fewer than five months.

It was the second time the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration has halted flights of a Boeing plane in six years. It had grounded the 787 Dreamliner due to problems with smoking batteries in 2013.

Shares of the world's biggest plane maker, which were up earlier in the session, fell 2 percent to $370.48. Shares had fallen about 13 percent since Sunday's crash, losing about $32 billion of market value.

"We're going to be issuing an emergency order of prohibition to ground all flights of the 737 MAX 8 and the 737 MAX 9 and planes associated with that line."
President Trump

Shares of Southwest Airlines Co., which has the largest fleet of 737 MAX aircraft, fell 0.4 percent.

"We're going to be issuing an emergency order of prohibition to ground all flights of the 737 MAX 8 and the 737 MAX 9 and planes associated with that line," Trump told reporters at the White House.

"The FAA is prepared to make an announcement very shortly regarding the new information and physical evidence that we have received from the site, and from other locations and through a couple of other complaints," he said.

Boeing said in a statement that it supported the move to temporarily ground 737 MAX operations.

Meanwhile, Germany's federal agency responsible for investigating air accidents will not analyze the black box from the Ethiopian Airlines plane that crashed, casting uncertainty over the process of finding out what may have caused the disaster.

"This is a new type of aircraft with a new black box, with new software. We can't do it," said Germout Freitag, a spokesman for Germany's Federal Bureau of Aircraft Accident Investigation (BFU).

The move leaves unclear the destination of the black box, which may yield vital details of what caused the plane to plunge to the ground, killing 157 people.

Canada also grounded 737 MAX jets on Wednesday, saying satellite data suggested similarities to a previous crash involving the same plane model.

Countries around the world had already grounded the 737 MAX jets or banned them from flying over their airspace since the Ethiopian Airlines flight crashed soon after taking off from Addis Ababa.

The still-unexplained crash followed another involving a Boeing 737 MAX in Indonesia five months ago that killed 189 people. Although there is no proof of any link, the twin disasters have spooked passengers.

Canadian Transport Minister Marc Garneau told a news conference that Ottawa would stop 737 MAX 8 and 9 jets from leaving, arriving or flying over Canada.

He said satellite data suggested similarities between the flight profiles of the Ethiopian jet and that of a Lion Air plane of the same type that crashed in Indonesia last year. Both planes crashed shortly after takeoff.

Air Canada and rival WestJet Airlines operate a total of 37 Boeing 737 MAX jets.

Boeing has said it has full confidence in the 737 MAX, a model that has 371 jets in operation around the world.

Ethiopian Airlines spokesman Asrat Begashaw said it was still unclear what happened on Sunday, but its pilot had reported control issues — as opposed to external factors such as birds.

"The pilot reported flight control problems and requested to turn back. In fact he was allowed to turn back," he said. REUTERS

Ex-Pats star Aaron Hernandez's murder conviction reinstated by court

Massachusetts' top court's decision clears the way for the victim's family to file a wrongful death lawsuit.

Massachusetts' top court on Wednesday reinstated former New England Patriots tight end Aaron Hernandez's conviction on charges of murdering an acquaintance in 2013, making it easier for the victim's family to sue his estate.

Hernandez hung himself in his prison cell in 2017, days after being cleared of a separate 2012 double murder, leading a lower-court judge to toss his conviction under a longstanding state legal doctrine that vacated guilty sentences for people who died before they had exhausted the appeals process.

The Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court scrapped that legal doctrine, saying that it was not in keeping with norms of "contemporary life."

"When a defendant dies irrespective of cause, while a direct appeal as of right challenging his conviction is pending, the proper course is to dismiss the appeal as moot," the court said.

Hernandez was convicted in 2015 of murdering acquaintance Odin Lloyd in an industrial park near his home by the Patriots' stadium and sentenced to life in prison without possibility of parole. In 2017, he was cleared in a separate case of murdering two Cape Verdean men outside a Boston nightclub after a dispute over a spilled drink.

After the 27-year-old former athlete hung himself, his family turned his brain over to scientists who determined that Hernandez had one of the worst cases of the brain disease chronic traumatic encephalopathy (CTE) that they had ever seen.

CTE, which can cause premature dementia and violent behavior, is a condition caused by the sort of repeated head hits that have long been part of football. Multiple former players have sued the league over it and the NFL has scrambled to change rules to reduce the risk.

"What it means is that Lloyd's family might be able to collect from the estate."
Robert Bloom, professor at Boston College Law School

The high court's decision clears the way for the victim's family to file a wrongful death lawsuit against Hernandez, who had a $41 million contract when he was arrested for Lloyd's killing, said Robert Bloom, a professor at Boston College Law School.

"What it means is that Lloyd's family might be able to collect from the estate," Bloom said. "They would have an action against the estate because of the wrongful death of their family member."

The workout you never knew you needed

X-Force is a quick, safe and highly effective workout.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

Getting fit is always on people's minds. Some workout to get healthier, some workout to look better and some workout as a de-stressor from the daily grind of life.

Whatever your reasons are, getting your body stronger and in shape is always a good idea. The problem is that life is busy, schedules are hectic, working out is a burden on your body, lifting can cause injuries and so many more excuses that can go on and on and fill up a book. That's where X-Force comes in. This groundbreaking workout is designed as an intense, safe, results-driven, all-in-one method for individuals with a hectic schedule. The press release itself states it will be "the hardest 30 minutes of your life."

Don't let the intensity scare you off- these workouts are designed for anyone at any fitness level, and trainers are with you every step of the way to guide you on your journey. There are no body builders, no judgment, no clunking of weights and yelling- just an all-around hard-hitting session that will leave you sore but extremely happy.

X-Force is unlike any workout you've seen before; it emphasizes negative (the lowering of the resistance) accentuated training. The resulting "inroad" (depletion of strength during a set of an exercise) is 40-50% deeper than conventional exercise. In layman's terms, you are getting an intense session in throughout the entirety of your workout; while you're pumping the iron out and while you bring the weights back down to rest. According to the release, recent research indicates that the potential intensity of lowering a heavy resistance might be the most important aspect of the exercise and is responsible for a higher level of muscular and bone strength.

X-Force originated in Sweden and was brought over to the US in 2012 by fitness and sports medicine pioneer Robert Schwab. Schwab is a leader in the prevention and rehabilitation of sports-related injuries; he delved into the study of athletic injuries specifically focusing on rehabilitation of injuries in the soft tissues of the lumbar and cervical spine. Schwab also trained both the U.S.A. women's Olympic swimming and field hockey teams, wrote over 100 articles in national publications on strength training and bodybuilding, trained Mike Mentzer for the 1978 Mr. Universe and the 1980 Mr. Olympia competitions and was inducted into the Philadelphia Jewish Sports Hall of Fame for excellence in sports medicine in 2008. Long and short, he knows his stuff.

"In my nearly half-century of training myself, athletes and clients, I have found X-Force to be the most challenging and effective workout I have experienced. It is a safe, medically sound, technologically advanced protocol, the future of meaningful training, which we are providing to Philadelphians today," said Schwab, owner and certified trainer of X-Force Philadelphia in a release. "With the first repetition of the first exercise of the X-Force workout, trainees realize that this is going to be a different kind of exercising experience. The personal training protocol will guarantee that every trainee 'experiences the experience' and realizes a new, highly advanced system of training, capable of stimulating unparalleled results."

X-Force is recommended once a week for 30 minutes. How is a half hour out of your week that intense? After your first session, you'll find out. "We did not look for once-a-week training as a training incentive. Rather, empirically, we discovered that X-Force's deep interoad requires approximately seven days for systemic recovery," said Schwab in a release.

A muscle is about 40% stronger lowering a resistance than lifting the resistance. That's why one session a week is perfect for your fitness regiment; X-Force compacts strength, cardio, respiratory efficiency and flexibility all into one intense session.

The words "intense" and "challenging" can be scary to some. But rest assured this workout is truly not as frightening as it seems. Is it intense and challenging? Yes. Are you still able to achieve your goals while doing it, even while not at your peak fitness level? Absolutely. That's what X-Force is for, building up your strength and fitness level in a safe, injury free, non-time consuming way.

X-Force Philadelphia is located in The Graham Building, 30 S. 15th St. To learn more about X-Force and to sign up for your first session visit xforcephiladelphia.com

Check out 'America's most romantic beach' at 'Tween Waters Island Resort & Spa

'Tween Waters Island Resort & Spa, located between the Gulf of Mexico and Pine Island Sound, boasts 13 picturesque acres of luxury resort, including an extensive stretch of sugary, white-sand beach named "America's Most Romantic Beach" by Travelocity.

What began as a collection of fishing cottages dating from 1931 now includes 137 units and cottages that range from standard guest rooms, studios and three-bedroom suites to two- and three-bedroom historic cottages. Decorated in a rustic luxury style, many of the 19 historic cottages are named after the resort's famous past visitors, including Anne Morrow Lindbergh, J.N. "Ding" Darling and Theodore Roosevelt.

The rooms certainly are comfortable and cozy, but most visitors come to 'Tween Waters for the miles of unsullied beaches on its Gulf of Mexico side. Captiva and its sister island, Sanibel, are known to have some of the best shelling beaches in the world. You'll see many guests bent in the "Captiva Crouch," searching for the perfect specimens for hours on end.

"Tween Waters Inn is 'Captiva's Must Stay' but we think you might call it 'Captiva's Mustn't Leave'"
Florida Travel + Life

If you aren't the sun-soaking type, 'Tween Waters features a range of activities to keep things lively; the marina offers chartered boats, seaplanes, canoes and kayak rentals for island or deep sea fishing, shelling, touring or eco-adventures. The Gulf and sound are also known for their stock of fish, dolphins, and manatees. Take it nice and easy on a stand-up paddleboard adventure, or take a fast track in a jet ski rental.

This 85-plus-year-old resort has a deep history, but still delivers the amenities of any modern luxury resort. Try lounging at the calm and quiet "serenity" pool, or soak up the sun and fun in the Olympic-sized pool area with your tropical drink from the active Oasis Pool Bar. Head indoors to the remodeled day spa for a manicure, pedicure, or hair styling, or enjoy a relaxing individual or couple's massage overlooking the property.

In the evening, enjoy the historic, award-winning and newly renovated Old Captiva House, which hosts a range of gourmet dishes, or try the Crow's Nest Beach Bar & Grille, a local favorite for casual dining.

For family fun, on Monday and Thursday nights from October to mid-August, young and old flock to the Crow's Nest on property to view the popular Captiva Crab Races. Be prepared to get a little wet and be insulted by the comic host.

Florida Travel + Life calls 'Tween Waters Inn "Captiva's Must Stay" but we think you might call it "Captiva's Mustn't Leave."

Doing your due diligence before flying

In light of the recent Boeing 737 MAX plane crash in Ethiopia, the world is beginning to demand answers from airlines.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

In light of the horrific Boeing 737 MAX 8 plane crash over the weekend in Ethiopia that killed 157 people, many airlines are choosing to ground all of these planes in order to keep their passengers safe. This was the second crash involving one of these planes in a span of six months. Oddly enough, there are still a few airlines willing to roll the dice on keeping these planes up in the air.

According to the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), there are currently around 350 Boeing 737 MAX planes being flown by 54 different airlines around the world. The U.S. airlines that still use the 737 MAX in their everyday operations are American Airlines, Southwest Airlines and United Airlines.

Many international airlines have chosen to ground these planes for the time being. Recently, the TUI Group, a U.K. travel group that includes many airlines throughout Europe, announced via Twitter that it would ground all Boeing 737 MAX 8 planes across all of its airlines. Some countries, such as Canada and the U.K., are even taking the additional step of prohibiting these planes from entering their airspace altogether. With mounting pressure to enact similar changes, President Trump announced on Wednesday an order to ground all 737 MAX 8 and 9 planes in the U.S.

So how can people take control and do the research into their modes of transportation so that they can avoid this sort of cataclysmic situation? After all, Boeing reportedly had been completely confident in the product it was producing. According to Business Insider, the 737 MAX was, initially, a massive success for Boeing with 4,699 orders in their books since the plane's unveiling in 2017.

But with two eerily similar and deadly crashes within such a short period of time, this seems like a watershed moment for air travel. In order to soothe the minds of rightfully skeptical travelers, the travel booking site Kayak has developed a brand-new filter that will now allow passengers from all over the world to book flights excluding certain problematic aircrafts in their searches.

If you have already booked a flight, however, you might want to start doing your own research on your reservation, if you happen to be flying out of one of those countries that has come to its senses. By using the TripAdvisor affiliate site SeatGuru, you will be able to enter your existing flight information — i.e., reservation number, airline, date, etc. — and receive greater detail on your flight, including the brand and model of the aircraft you are flying on.

While it is impossible to predict the future or even trust the concept of flying ever again, knowing that there are ways for passengers to do their due diligence ahead of their flights is going to change the industry for the better.

SPORTS

With Embiid back, are there concerns for Butler?

The Sixers are getting their mojo back with the return of their star center, but Jimmy Butler's game is showing a concerning trend.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

What a difference the return of Joel Embiid has made.

The Philadelphia 76ers have seemingly exhaled after getting their starting-five back together when their star center returned from a knee issue that sidelined him for almost a month.

After dropping three-of-four games — including a last-second defeat to the lowly Bulls last week — the Sixers were stuck in neutral, sitting in fourth place in the Eastern Conference but within touching distance of the third-place Indiana Pacers.

The return of Embiid on Sunday quickly shifted things back into gear and the timing couldn't have been any better as those very Pacers were on-deck.

He dropped 33 points with 12 rebounds in his return as the 76ers put together what felt like their best game since a Jan. 21 beatdown of the Houston Rockets. The 24-year-old big man was visibly seen shouting "I'm back," toward the adoring Sixers crowd during the victory, which was a great sight for the sore eyes of head coach Brett Brown.

"He is a difference maker in all ways, shapes, and forms," he said, via the AP.

Embiid followed it up with a monster 17-point, 19-rebound effort in a too-close-for-comfort win over the Cleveland Cavaliers on Tuesday night, but the victory ensured Philadelphia stayed in third place in the East, just five games behind the second-place Toronto Raptors with 14 games to play.

It's worth noting that Jimmy Butler was given the night off for scheduled rest, so the Sixers weren't necessarily at full strength.

While Butler gives Philadelphia one of the best starting fives in the entire league, it's not exactly a hot take to suggest that something isn't quite right with his game.

The 29-year-old shooting guard's game has transformed throughout the season, and not necessarily for the best.

At surface value, he's still performing close to Butler-like levels during his first (and possibly only) season in Philadelphia. In 45 games, he's posting 18.4 points per game while shooting 47.1-percent from the field. While those points per game would be his lowest since the 2013-14 season, a drop in production was expected when sharing the ball with Embiid and Ben Simmons.

What's puzzling is his outside shooting, particularly from three-point range.

Over the past five years, Butler has attempted an average of 217 three-pointers per season, sinking approximately 67 of those. It seems as though he's on pace to meet that average of three-pointers made 58 this season with the Timberwolves and Sixers.

The problem though is that he has attempted just 16 three-pointers over his last 10 games, which was the first game back from the All-Star break. It's even more alarming that he's sunk just two of those 16 attempts for a 12.5-percent clip.

Butler has clashed with Brown at points throughout the year when addressing his role within the offense, but his willingness to pass up wide-open shots is a concerning development for the offense's hopes of hitting their stride ahead of the playoffs.

Eagles' moves propel their Super Bowl odds

The Birds now have the sixth-best odds at +1600.

MATT BURKE

Matt Burke is a veteran sports journalist and the Founder and Editor in Chief of MetroBet.

GETTY IMAGES

The Eagles made one of the biggest splashes in free agency in 2017 in landing top receiver Alshon Jeffery, and it paid off big-time 11 month later with a Super Bowl win. The Rams were highly active in March 2018, bringing in the top defensive player on the market in Ndamukong Suh, and they were rewarded with a trip to this past February's Super Bowl.

Making moves in March can be a big step forward in solidifying your franchise as a Super Bowl contender, and the sportsbooks agree. The Eagles' trade for DeSean Jackson and their signings of Malik Jackson and Jason Peters have made their Super Bowl odds climb.

On the day after last month's Super Bowl, the Eagles had the ninth-best odds to win it all in the 2019 season at +1800. Here were the top 10 odds on Feb. 5 at FanDuel Sportsbook.

Patriots +800
Chiefs +900
Saints +900
Rams +1100
Colts +1400
Chargers +1400
Steelers +1400
Packers +1800
Eagles +1800
Falcons +2000

And here are the odds at FanDuel as of today.

Chiefs +700
Patriots +700
Saints +850
Rams +900
Chargers +1500
Eagles +1600
Bears +1600
Colts +1800
Packers +1800
Browns +1800

The Eagles vaulted over the Steelers here, mostly thanks to the superstar fire sale that went on in Pittsburgh. The Birds also climbed over the Colts and Packers, who were both relatively quiet in free agency this week.

Cleveland was obviously the biggest riser this week due to their trade for star receiver Odell Beckham. On Feb. 5 they had +4000 odds to win it all, the 20th-best odds in the league. Today they have the 10th-best odds at +1800.

Eagles fans will also be happy to see the Giants now with +6000 odds to win the Super Bowl, the 26th-"best" odds in the league.

Sports betting 101: What is a point spread?

VSiN

The point spread is another form of betting odds that's very similar to a moneyline bet. The difference is that in addition to predicting who will win the game, the point spread includes a margin of victory. In certain cases — such as in college basketball and college football — there is a huge discrepancy in talent between the two teams playing. In those cases, betting the moneyline is too obvious because it is clear that one team will beat the other. That's when the point spread comes into play, as the oddsmakers will set a line where there is a margin of victory.

- For example, imagine that two teams, the Knicks and 76ers, are facing each other. The Knicks may have odds of +11.5 while the Sixers' odds are -11.5. In this case, the Sixers are favored to win. Just like in the moneyline bet, the negative sign before the number indicates who is expected to win. The number represents the expected margin of victory. if you bet on the Sixers, you need them to win by more than 11.5 points for you to cover your bet. That means they need to win the game by 12 points or more. If you bet the Knicks, that means they can lose by 11 points or less, or win the game, and you still win your bet. It's a way of evening the playing field, even if one team is highly favored to win over the other.
- If, during the actual game, the margin of victory lands exactly on the spread, it is called a push or a tie, and no one wins the bet.

Making sense of a big basketball week

GETTY IMAGES

Looking at the AAC tourney and NBA.

HARRY MAYES

Harry Mayes is a sports betting expert and a longtime sports radio voice in Philadelphia. Mayes currently hosts a talk radio show on 97.3 ESPN in South Jersey.

Conference tournament week is here and I have my eyes on a matchup in the American Athletic Conference featuring perhaps the worst team in Division I — the Tulane Green Wave (4-26), losers of 20 straight games — playing the home team Memphis Tigers (19-12), who are looking to make a late run to the Dance. Memphis didn't cover 10.5 points in their meeting in New Orleans, winning 83-79, due mostly to being outrebounded 48-35 (21-10 offensive rebounds). The Tigers got 43 points (5-9 3 pt) from their star, senior guard Jeremiah Martin, in a 102-76 blowout winner as 17.5-point favorites. The Tigers are very tough at home, having only lost outright to a highly-ranked Tennessee team and a tough, solid Cincinnati squad in league play.

Memphis is 4-1 ATS in their last five and are 10-7 ATS at home this year. They dominate Tulane in 14 of 18 offensive efficiency categories. Tulane's main weapon is sophomore guard Caleb Daniels (16.8 ppg), and though they have covered their last four games the Green Wave is 5-10 ATS as a road team.

I don't expect any inspired effort from Tulane to try and save their coach's job, as the Tulane AD, Troy Dannen, is already on record as saying Mike Dunleavy Sr. will return next season. I like Memphis to roll with home BBQ cooking and a big effort from Martin to cover the 16 points.

Pick: MEMPHIS (-16)

A look-ahead selection in the NBA that has my attention is Sacramento at Philadelphia. The Sixers have not looked like a polished, cohesive unit with their new starting lineup. Coach Brett Brown needs to see a lot more consistency over the 14 remaining games to have hope they can go on a deep Playoff run. Sacramento is much improved at 33-33 and four games out of a playoff spot in the West. However, they are not the same team on the road, going 10-15 ATS as a road dog and 16-16 ATS on the road overall. They will also be coming into this game on a B2B situation, playing in Boston Thursday night. The Kings are 2-9 ATS with no rest and this is also the last game of their road trip. Beware! Sacramento is 3-7 straight up L10 and has lost four of L5 ATS. Sixers are in a nice cover spot here.

Pick: SIXERS

Capitals vs. Flyers betting preview

The Washington Capitals (41-22-7) are after their second win in eight days, and fourth in their last five meetings, against the Philadelphia Flyers (34-27-8) this Thursday night.

When these teams last met at Wells Fargo Center on March 6, the Capitals scored four goals on just 19 shots against Brian Elliott, who was benched for Cam Talbot. All-star left wing Alex Ovechkin had a goal and an assist in that 5-3 victory. Washington must be happy to see that Elliott is the confirmed starter in net once more. The Capitals are expected to turn to Braden Holtby again, and he stopped 27 of 30 pucks in his last start against the Flyers.

Philly's offense will be shorthanded once more as right wing Jakub Voracek was given a two-game suspension for his hit on Islander defenseman Johnny Boychuk last Saturday. Centers Claude Giroux and Sean Couturier, who each had two points against Washington last week, will have to pick up the slack.

Per Covers.com, the Flyers are 1-7 in their last eight home games against clubs with winning road records. The Caps, meanwhile, have won seven of their last eight tilts and five straight against teams with losing records.

Prediction: Capitals win, 4-2

The play: Capitals money-line
